Creating sustainable environments that encourage long-term healthy living

In our future, sustainability will be an inherent part of daily life. We have the capacity to create sustainable environments that support healthy living well into the future by working together to think differently and address challenges today.

Responsibility

Having a robust and dedicated health and safety approach that secures lives and people's wellness is a key component of operating a business responsibly on all levels. It entails maximizing our potential while embracing diversity and fostering inclusive communities. It entails conducting oneself in a just and moral manner, making judgments with integrity, and being a reliable business partner with regard to the supply chain. Operating responsibly for the environment and local communities is what it means.

Low-carbon construction

Our business is driven by the development of transformative solutions that assist our clients in achieving their challenging sustainability objectives. This calls for low-carbon, circular, intelligent, and sustainable solutions. This can only be accomplished via knowledge, understanding, and learning. In collaboration, we will create and implement cutting-edge net zero solutions for the built environment.

Resilience

The issues that modern society faces, including those caused by extreme weather, air pollution, energy constraints, and water scarcity, are not adequately addressed by many of the structures and sites of today. Additionally, it's possible that they weren't planned for societal trends to alter, such as urban population growth and shifting lifestyles. We picture a world in which sustainability is just a natural part of daily life, as well as a future populated by metropolitan areas that are healthier, more sustainable, and more robust.

Green development

The development philosophy of "innovation, coordination, green, openness and sharing" is firmly established by ACN, and it holds the view that "clean rivers and green mountains are as valuable as gold and silver." We continue to strengthen environmental management, eagerly support energy conservation and emission reduction, actively carry out environmental protection initiatives, encourage our firm's green development, expand its green strength, cultivate a green culture, and create a green brand.
